NLG PDX INVITES YOU!

The Portland Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild actively defends leftist and democratic movements throughout the city. Originally known as the Oregon chapter when founded in the late 1930s, it was formed in response to the infamous “Red Squad” — a clandestine outfit of the Portland Police Bureau formed to undermine and destroy union and political organizing it viewed as a threat to the order of the city. The fighting spirit of the chapter’s early work lives on today, as our members uphold police and governmental accountability, while representing the population of Portland.

Our Mass Defense network regularly supports #DontShootPDX, local unions, Trans Pride organizers, #OccupylCE and other leftist organizers who rely on our legal observer program, jail support, and courtroom representation in the face of police violence and state repression. Recently, Guild members have spent countless hours successfully defending arrestees after a multi-day protest at the Portland ICE holding facility.

Between 2011-2014, our chapter was a member of the Safe Communities Project/ACT for Justice and Dignity, a coalition of grassroots and community organizations organizing to limit ICE access to Oregon jails. Through the coalition, Guild members forged a strong alliance with groups working to dismantle ICE and its oppressive policies, and we are currently part of the Oregon Ready Coalition, a coalition of organizations continuing to work on these critical issues. We continue to provide legal support for anti-ICE rallies, and our Lewis & Clark law students, as well as chapter members, make multiple trips a year to the family detention centers in South Texas to provide legal support for on-the-ground organizations that advocate for asylum-seekers.

Portland is home to 4,000 unhoused individuals, and a recent report from the Portland Police Bureau revealed that the city’s houseless population accounted for most PPB arrests in 2017. Our chapter works to preserve the rights of unhoused people by opposing city ordinances and police budget decisions that criminalize houselessness. Our attorneys provide legal support to houseless collectives throughout the city, and for individuals and families displaced by the city’s raids of houseless communities.

The Portland NLG chapter also has an active Police Accountability Project. Chapter members represent a community police accountability group in litigation brought by the US DOJ against the Portland Police, achieving “enhanced amicus” status, which grants the group heightened participation in the ongoing litigation. We also provide “Know Your Rights” trainings to affinity groups across Oregon, represent people who file complaints with the Portland Police Bureau, participate in stakeholder and policy review committees, and provide testimony and advocacy to challenge police budget priorities and strengthen oversight mechanisms. Recently, we provided critical legal analysis in opposition to a District Attorney legal opinion that would have further diminished police officer accountability; the City Council adopted the NLG’s position and now the City compels officer testimony in incidents involving deadly use of force.

Other chapter projects include a law student prison abolition workgroup, prisoner legal clinic, and ongoing support for the “Care Not Cops: Mental Health Care Not Policing” campaign anchored by Critical Resistance. Portland NLG members also participated in international NLG delegations, organized CLEs on international human rights and government surveillance, and led a local anti-war efforts advising soldiers about service discharge options. While the battle for civil liberties may change, Portland’s NLG chapter remains committed to equality, justice, and freedom.

Portland Chapter of the National “Lunchers” Guild, July 2018.
