HISTORY OF FELLOWSHIP

The Haywood Burns Memorial Fellowship for Social and Economic Justice has its roots in the National Lawyers Guild's tradition of providing legal, political and educational support to the important progressive movements of the day. In the summer of 1964, the Guild sent lawyers and law students to provide legal support for the emerging civil rights movement in what became known as the Mississippi Summer. In 1973, the Summer Projects Committee was officially formed. The committee sent students to assist with the defense of the Attica Brothers, to work with the growing farmworker initiatives in California, and to support Native American treaty rights in the Pacific Northwest.

Over the years, the Summer Projects program has expanded to place hundreds of students with public interest organizations working to protect and further the civil rights of oppressed individuals and communities in the United States. Although providing legal work under the direction of their attorney-organizers is still important, the primary mission of the Projects is to strengthen each student's long-term commitment to promote justice and equality. Fellows have worked with groups to provide legal, political, and educational support on a wide variety of issues, including housing rights; union democracy; workplace health and safety; the death penalty and prison reform; LGBTQ rights; defense of protesters from police harassment and criminal sanctions; and international human rights.

In 1996, the program was renamed after Haywood Burns, long-time radical lawyer, law professor and former president of the National Lawyers Guild, whose life and work created a legend to inspire generations to come. To learn more about Haywood Burns, visit <http://www.nlg.org/fellowships>.

ABOUT THE FELLOWSHIPS

The Haywood Burns Fellowships are designed to encourage students to work in the National Lawyers Guild's tradition of "peoples' lawyering." The program exists to help students apply their talents and skills to find creative ways to use the law to advance justice. Burns Fellowships provoke law students to challenge traditional notions of how one must practice law and to provide a summer experience that will enrich and challenge them.

Fellowships may be completed with any existing organization whose mission addresses the needs of underserved individuals and groups. We encourage applicants to identify grassroots and non-traditional work opportunities for which there is a serious current societal need. This could be a small non-profit, a short-staffed community law firm, or an organizing campaign that needs legal assistance. The Haywood Burns Fellowships usually provide a rigorous legal experience as well as a political one. At the back of this brochure we list names of some of the former Haywood Burns placements to give students an idea of the work we have funded in the past.

The kinds of grassroots programs that are appealing to us have included developing legal trainings for animal rights and environmental activists, filing habeas petitions, assisting LGBTQ prisoners, conducting research designed to repeal the death penalty, and providing legal assistance to low-wage immigrant workers. We encourage applicants to pick timely projects that might be overlooked by more traditional sources of funding. We generally do not provide funding for work at large non-profits or agencies that receive government funding, or nonprofits that are able to provide their own funding to interns (such as the ACLU and the Center for Constitutional Rights). We do provide funding for both national and international projects.

In 2021, we expect to award $3,000 for ten weeks of full-time work (unless otherwise noted) and encourage students to pursue matching public interest grants or course credit to supplement this stipend. In 2021, we will be considering both in person and remote internships.

A DIFFERENT FELLOWSHIP EXPERIENCE

One of the benefits of a Burns Fellowship is the mentorship and apprenticeship relationships that Fellows develop with NLG members locally, regionally, and nationally. Depending on the geographic location of the placements, we will introduce Fellows to Guild members working in their regions. Additionally, we provide free membership in the NLG for one year to all Fellows. As members of the Guild, Fellows are encouraged to join one or more of our many issue-related email lists, receive our organizational publications, and attend our annual convention at a discounted rate. Perhaps most important, membership in the Guild introduces students to a progressive community of lawyers, law students, legal workers, and jailhouse lawyers working in the service of the people. Guild lawyers are at the forefront of legal challenges related to civil rights, military law, immigration law, environmental law, national and international human rights and many other areas. The Guild is also a valuable forum for applying the tradition of “peoples’ lawyering” to meet present needs.

SELECTION CRITERIA AND EVALUATION

Projects will be evaluated on the basis of legal, political, and geographical diversity, as well as the project’s connections to the ongoing needs of the persons and communities served. Applications will be evaluated on the basis of the student’s and organization’s commitment to social justice and on a balancing of legal, practical and political work and skills development. Reviewers will also take into consideration the need for the project and how the experience will further the Fellow’s legal and career trajectory. Projects that produce a practical product or analysis that can be applied to the Guild’s work will be looked on favorably.

REQUIREMENTS OF FELLOWS

We expect to hear from our Fellows over their ten-week placement and encourage them to email us to let us know how their work is progressing or to ask us for help networking with other Guild members. In addition to their work during the ten weeks of the Fellowship, Fellows will also be asked to share their experiences with the broader Guild by submitting an article to Guild Notes, the NLG Blog, or NLG Review.
